Lei making

Park Ranger Noah Gomes is a Master's student in Hawaiian Language and Literature at the University of Hawai'i at Hilo and has a B.A. in Hawaiian Language. Originally from Wahiawā, on the island of O'ahu, he now resides in Hilo. Noah has been a lifelong student of Hawaiian natural history and is currently researching the ancient bird hunters of the Hawaiian archipelago. The different styles of lei-making is a skill he has learned from his university education and through personal interest.

‘Ike Hana No‘eau is a series of Hawaiian cultural programs sponsored by Hawai‘i Volcanoes National Park.
Park entrance fees apply.
